Raw materials: use of plant and animal fibres, skins, and furs; domestication of flax; use of hairy and woolly wool; introduction and spread of woolly sheep wool and 'the textile revolution'

Scientific methods of analysing ancient textiles and recognising the provenience of fibres: strontium and isotope tracing; ancient DNA; protein analysis

Development and changes of textile techniques (spinning, twining, splicing, weaving, needle-work, etc.) during the Neolithic and Early Bronze Age

Studies of textile tools: the first appearance of spindle whorls, other spinning tools and techniques, loom weights, looms, tablets, frames, etc., and their changes and spread through distant regions and cultures

Basketry, mats, and other techniques

Studies of imprints of textiles, basketry, and mats in various materials; methods and analyses

Experimental archaeology and its role in reconstructions of early textiles, tools, and techniques

The social context of early textiles: textiles in society; household production; work organisation and specialization; textiles in habitational and funerary context; social status, gender, exchange, and trade of the raw materials and textiles
