

COMMUNICATIONS

On addresses. In gathering this month's quota of bibliography in the stacks of the University Library, I came across an offprint marked as a gift to NESTOR, but catalogued by the Library as if it were the complete issue from which it had been taken. Obviously it had been sent with insufficient address, and the best guess the Post Office or the Campus Mail could make was that it belonged to the Library. The Library's best guess, since they receive Nestor, as well as the periodical from which the article was reprinted, and since the whole number of that periodical had not yet been received, was to catalogue it. The Library now promises to relinquish it to me as soon as its records are untangled.

The Moral: Letters, offprints, and other materials intended for Nestor should be addressed to the Editor by name.

Complication: The U.S. Post Office has today introduced a new and comprehensive system of zoning. Thus all the addresses for subscribers in the U.S. must be modified, and a new list published soon. The minimum address for the Editor is:

Emmett L. Bennett, Jr.
The Old Observatory
Madison, Wisconsin 53706
U.S.A.

This should be sufficient; but one may add Institute for Research in the Humanities, or University of Wisconsin, or both, for additional security.

Census of Holdings of Guides to the Stratigraphic Museum in American Libraries continued. None held - U. of Chicago, U. of Mississippi.

CORRESPONDENCE

To the Editor:- Linear A and Karian.

Such forms as Kar. mes-/mesna- : Lyc. mahâñna ~ Kar. mav-/mavna- : Lyc. mawâñna (for *n-heteroclyc cf. Lyd. ðivva- etc.), Kar. tavse- : Lyd. tavše-, Kar. kave(a)- : Lyd. kave-/Hit.-Luw. kawija, Kar. ra(v)- : Hitt.-Luw. ara(w)-, Kar. sav- : Lyd. sav- (cf. OI. su- "well-" etc.), Kar. nda- "in-": Lyc. ñta- "in-" (cf. Lat. endo-), Kar. lûleki: Hitt.-Luw. lulah(^h)i, Kar. slm(-odo): Lyc. slam(-ati) and hlñmm(-i) (possibly a recent borrowing from Accadian šalmu; cf. Lin. A ya-sa-sa-la-mu ??), and many others testify to the fact that Karian is a language of the Hittite-Luwian group. (As to Karian transcription, cf. my papers in Voprosy jazykoznanija 5-1962 and 3-1963; cf. also V. Ševoroškin, "On Karian," RHA, in press).

On the other hand one may compare some Karian words (esp. names) resp. word-stems in Greek versions (e.g., Κιλδαρα : Lin. A ki-da-ro, τάβα, Τάβαι : Lin. A ta-pa, cf. PN tab-ou in Kar. inscriptions, etc.) as well as in Karian inscriptions with the formally corresponding forms of Linear A. One may compare also some Karian and Minoan suffixes, especially those containing a dental (as for Karian, cf. -e^θe, -i^θi, -a^θe- = -^θτη - in Greek versions in "pseudodemotica" with Kar. θ = [t] or the like; cf. Lin. A [-eti], -[iti], [-ati], -v- or -n-). Both Karian and Minoan have -i- "datives" and maybe n-heteroclitics. Last of all one may observe that Karian shares with Minoan all the features which A. Heubeck (cf. his Praegraeca) singles out as characteristic of the "Hittite" languages (peculiarities of stem-formation, q- and L-sounds and so on). In this connection one may observe that some correspondences between Karian stems and suffixes and the same elements of "Prae-Greek" names and toponyms of Linear B may be established as well.

Karian may be regarded therefore as a "link" between Minoan and known Hittite-Luwian languages of Asia Minor: it is noteworthy that [the ancestors of] Karian and Lycian (which also seems to have many features common with Minoan) form a link between Minoan and the languages of Asia Minor geographically as well (perhaps one may speak therefore of a "Hittite-Minoan" linguistic community).

APUD BIBLIOPOLAS

It seems possible to give some indication of the comparative price of these books when a second copy is noticed, by marking a new low price by ↗L, and a new high price by ↗H; a third copy which sets no record will have ↗. The figure following ↗ and ↗H books will indicate the approximate excess (in US dollars & cents) above the lowest price known.

... qu'il est permis de rire entre mycénologues

A late Professor of Laputa's whose scholarship fell short of his Tutor's, left unpublished (greatly to his credit) the following MS:

"Hymn on a Brick, or, A Document Mysteriously Greek"

With patient labour I have at last succeeded in interpreting the inscription to be seen on a squarish tile of clay, brought me (under his cloak) by a reputable dealer in antiquity. Without further ado, the text, and my translation:

"Ορθε διε, ἄσφε Αἰσανδε εἰλαρ [β] θέσκει *Διλιμιούς κόρφα ηνάξτερα [γ] δοκεῖ ιερέρει οῦτε μιν 'Ιερφει [δ] 'Εσθονίω λευκωνυχάς χεῖρας.

O Godlike Orthos! (as) her (?) defense against (?) Fate the Princess the Dilim(n)ians [was this the site of an Assyrian Trading Post?] keeps putting. It seems to the Priest, but not to him[i.e.], to Hierys, the Estonian, (that) white-nailed (are) her hands.

Upon the accuracy of this reading I stake my Reputation."

Alas, for my friend;
 here is his text. The tile is crumbled away.
